IS THIS MY BALLOT?

Most races are the same for all of Princeton. A few depend on your address.

Races marked Depends on your address appear only on some Princeton ballots. Your voter registration card shows your voting precinct number, and the county's ballot lookup shows your exact ballot.

ON EVERY PRINCETON BALLOT

- All statewide races and the 15th Court of Appeals
- U.S. House District 3 (all of Princeton)
- Fifth Court of Appeals, countywide offices, and county judges
- Collin County Propositions A-D and Collin College Proposition A
- Appraisal District board, Places 1-3

DEPENDS ON YOUR ADDRESS

- Texas House: District 67 or District 89
- Justice of the Peace: Precinct 2 for most of Princeton; Precinct 1 or 3 at the edges
- County Commissioner: Precinct 2 race only south of U.S. 380; most of Princeton is in Precinct 3, which has no race this year
- City Council: only inside Princeton city limits
- School board: only inside Princeton ISD

VOTING PRECINCT	TEXAS HOUSE	COMMISSIONER RACE?	JUSTICE OF THE PEACE
9	District 67	No (Precinct 3)	Precinct 2
10	District 67	No (Precinct 3)	Precinct 2

114	District 89	Yes (Precinct 2)	Precinct 3

Read from Collin County's precinct maps ↗ (Jan. 2024) and Texas Legislative Council district reports. Princeton has grown since these maps were drawn, so newer areas may not be listed. Confirm with the county ballot lookup ↗. No State Senate race is on Princeton ballots this year: all of Princeton is in Senate District 8, which is not up for election.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

Start with what the office can actually do.

Open any race to see the office's responsibilities, each candidate's background and stated reasons for running, and linked evidence. The guide does not summarize or compare candidates for you; each card uses the same fields so you can compare them side by side. Candidate priorities are labeled as candidate claims; official records and independent reporting are linked separately.

> Important: This is not an official ballot and it does not recommend candidates or positions on propositions. It covers every item on Collin County's official all-race sample ballot that applies in Princeton, including county and Collin College bond propositions. Some races depend on your address, and each one is marked "Depends on your address." Check your official sample ballot for your precinct before voting.

PROPOSITION · ALL COLLIN COUNTY VOTERS

Collin County Proposition A - Courts and Jail ($296.5 million)

Ballot proposition · For or Against

TYPE
One-time authorization

WHAT IT AUTHORIZES
Authorizes $296.5 million in county bonds for court and detention facilities, including adult detention, medical and mental-health detention, and adult probation facilities.

WHAT IT WOULD FUND

- Jail expansion of about 550 beds plus cell-door, elevator, and HVAC upgrades
- About $90 million for the courthouse: finishing shell courtrooms, elevators and escalators, roof, and renovations
- Adult probation facilities

TAX IMPACT

The county projects its debt-service rate could rise from 4.18 to about 4.95 cents per $100 of value over the six-year program (FY2027-2032) if all four county propositions pass, assuming 3% annual revenue growth. The county administrator said the package "might not necessarily involve a tax increase." State law requires bond propositions repaid with property taxes to carry the words "THIS IS A TAX INCREASE," whether or not the tax rate ultimately changes.

A VOTE FOR

The county may issue up to $296.5 million in bonds for these facilities and levy taxes to repay them.

A VOTE AGAINST

The county may not issue these bonds.

Authorizes $475 million in county bonds for non-tolled roads and bridges in Collin County, including land and rights-of-way.

WHAT IT WOULD FUND

- Dallas North Tollway service roads and a second Outer Loop service road west of U.S. 75
- A service road from Farmersville toward Rockwall County
- Widening existing roads and improving intersections

TAX IMPACT

Shares the county debt-service projection described under Proposition A. State law requires bond propositions repaid with property taxes to carry the words "THIS IS A TAX INCREASE," whether or not the tax rate ultimately changes.

A VOTE FOR

The county may issue up to $475 million in road bonds and levy taxes to repay them.
